MONUJ

Vintage & Second-Hand Is The New Love

- We're producing over 100 billions new garments from new fibers every single year and the planet cannot sustain that. One of the major environmental issues surrounding the cheap garment industry is water pollution, as it is commune practice for textile factories to discard untreated toxic wastewater directly into rivers.
  - When you can take a dress for the same price as 3 cups of coffee, ask yourself who made it and how much where they paid.
  - One example is the label Burberry when it took the decision to burn $38 millions of unsold stock rather to let it fall into the wrong hands.
  - Cartier owner, Richemont has bought back about $545 millions worth of watches from retailers partners, to avoid having the time pieces sold cheaper on the grey market by unauthorized retailers. Most were destroyed and the parts were recycled.
  - H&M alone was reported in March to have $4,3 million worth of unsold cloths.
  - Our shop is online and we enhance to make your experience worth while. We strongly advise you to shop the items you truly need as we are here to support a commune purpose: a sustainable lifestyle. We are a vintage and second-hand online shop which constantly changes the inventory bringing vintage and durable clothes, branded and non-branded, handmade and sustainable cloths. We are a small team of currently 3 people who strive to offer you the best quality therefore we are personally taking good care in providing you our true values.
